III Grants

We remind all students who want to apply for financial support to submit their abstracts before June 21, and email to our conference email address latinmag2019@uoh.cl. You must include at the heading of your message the sentence "Request for economic support". Additionally include the following information: Affiliation, updated CV summarized and a letter (maximum 1 page) indicating the reasons for which support is requested. We are currently making all our efforts to obtain external support that allows us to grant the greatest amount of scholarships.

IV Special edition at "Journal of South American Earth Science"

We have the great pleasure to announce that the Journal of South American Earth Sciences will publish a thematic issue under the theme "New advances in Paleomagnetic and Magnetic Fabric Studies in Latin America" in 2020, based on contributions to LatinMag 2019. The range of topics is broad enough to incorporate a significant part of the research in the field of Earth Sciences carried out by the LatinMag community. If you are planning to submit a manuscript to the special number based on your abstract, send an email to latinmag2019@uoh.cl, indicating title and authors of the abstract. Unless indicated by the principal author, preliminary title and list of co-authors will be the same of the submitted abstract. The deadline for submitting the manuscripts has been set as February 28th 2020. Invited Editors for this special issue are: Augusto Rapalini (Argentina), Fernando Poblete (Chile), Cecilia Caballero (Mexico) and Irene Raposo (Brasil).

IV General Organization of the Conference

The conference will take place between Monday 18th of November, and Friday 22nd of November 2019. The registration of those attending the conference will take place on Monday, between 9:30 and 13:10 hrs. Simultaneous to the registration, between 14:00 and 17:10 hrs, a workshop will be held. Between 17:30 and 18:30 hrs, we will have a guest talk. Between 18:30 and 22:00 will take place the official opening and the traditional "ice breaker".

On Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays in the morning oral presentations and posters will be held, which will be organized according to the 4 major sessions in which the congress has been divided: (a) Evolution of the earth and planetary magnetic field: models, current and past data, (b) Earth Geodynamics: paleogeography and tectonic evolution, (c) Rock Magnetism and (d) Magnetism methods and applications.

Thursday afternoon will be assigned to a round table with the aim of encouraging the interaction of researchers and undergraduate and graduate students from different laboratories to work on a common problem. For this, during the meeting, 4 key issues will be chosen associated with each of the proposed sessions, which will be addressed and discussed in this instance by the different working groups that are formed there. After the round table, the LatinMag assembly will be held and the meeting will be closed.

For Friday, we are organizing field trips and sightseeing visits for conference participants. Soon we will have more information about these activities, including the maximum number of participants and prices.
